

Race, Restitution and Religion

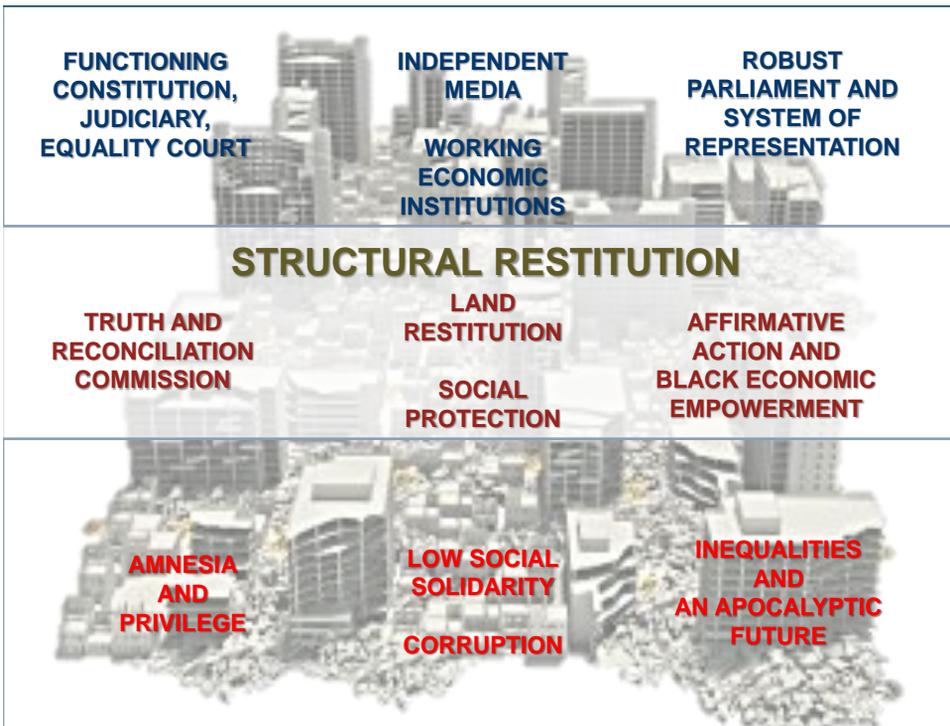

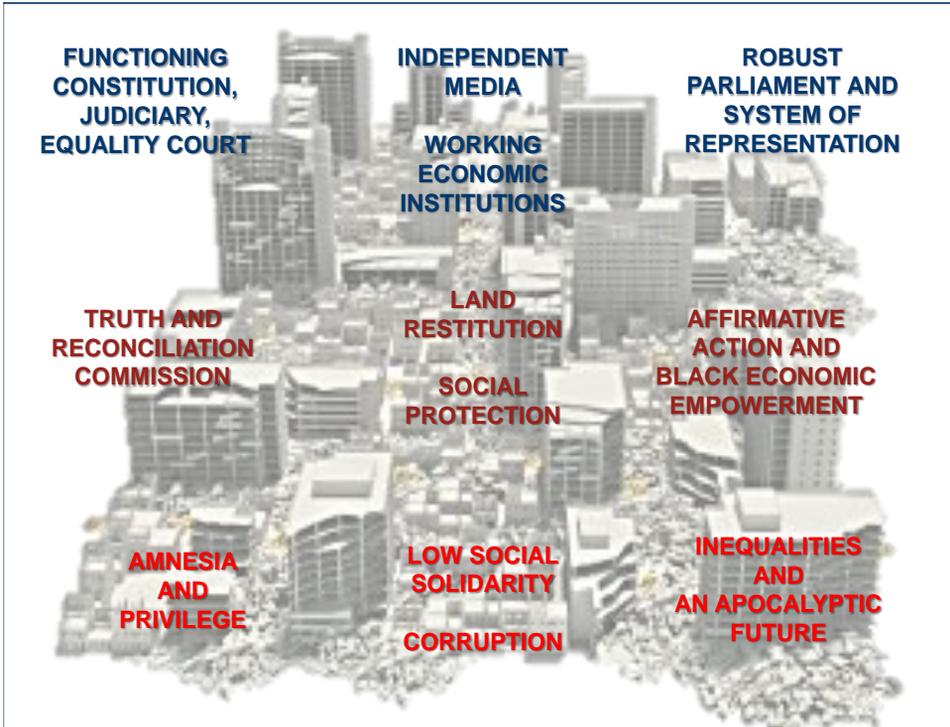

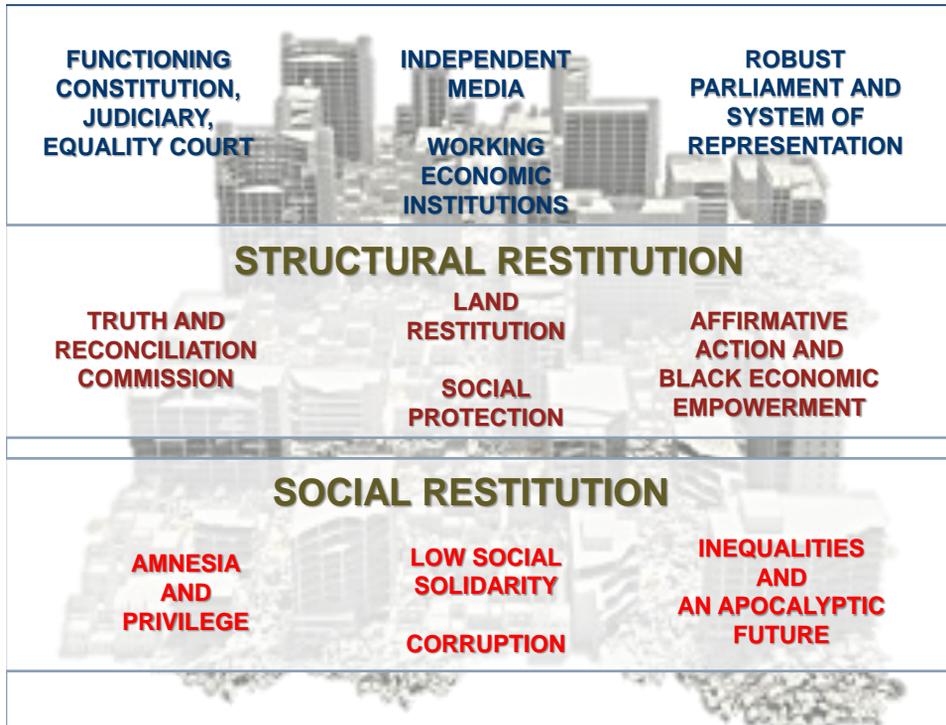

Sharlene Swartz

- Research Director, Human Sciences Research Council, South Africa
- Adj. Assoc. Professor of Sociology, University of Cape Town
- Visiting Fellow, Harvard FXB Center for Health and Human Rights

Gordon Conwell Theological Seminary
29 October 2014

Theoretical foundations

1. Eleazar Barkan – Restitution beyond legal remedies
2. Steve Biko – Black consciousness and Xolela Mangcu – ‘Consciousness of blackness’
3. Nancy Fraser – recognition and redistribution
4. Iris Marion Young - Social connection and solidarity
5. Peggy McIntosh – Disrupting privilege
6. Pierre Bourdieu - Redistributing capitals
7. Todd Calder - Forward looking restitution
8. Troyna and Soudien - Antiracist, human rights ed.
9. Social restitution and the Restitution of Personhood

The study

1. Started off with conceptual ideas:
 - The restitution of personhood
 - Action at multiple levels
 - New locations of actors
2. 60 interviews, 90 minutes; people researchers knew
3. Demographically but not statistically representative
4. Across 'Races' – 'Black', 'White' and 'Coloured'
5. Across Generations – 21-25, 26-35, 36-49, and over 50
6. Across Classes – education, geography, property

Interview questions

1. What are the things in our country that bring you hope/despair?
2. How were/are you affected by our country's past history?
3. In what ways does the past still affect people today?
4. What does the term 'restitution' mean to you?
5. How do you respond to these two stories?
6. How would you label yourself with regards to the past?
7. What has been done so far to make things right?
8. When will we know when we've done enough?
9. What gets in the way of people making restitution?
10. What do you think will happen if nothing more is done?
11. What ideas do you have for making things right?

Labels Activity

When thinking about the past, what labels would you give yourself? Choose from the list or add your own.

❖ Architect of injustice	❖ Implementer of resistance to injustice
❖ Architect of resistance to injustice	❖ Informer
❖ Beneficiary of injustice	❖ Inheritor of benefit
❖ Beneficiary of resistance to injustice	❖ Inheritor of dishonour
❖ Bystander	❖ Ostrich – someone who put their head in the ground and avoided things
❖ Collaborator	❖ Perpetrator
❖ Dishonoured by injustice	❖ Rescuer
❖ Dishonoured by resistance to injustice	❖ Victim
❖ Implementer of injustice

- How easy or difficult is it for you to choose a label?
- Which labels do you like/dislike? Why?

Story-Response

'A Stolen Bicycle'

Jabu and Johnny are two boys who live next door to each other. Both have bicycles. One day Johnny steals Jabu's bicycle. Jabu tries hard to get it back but can't. Of course they stop being friends. A year passes and they do not talk or even look at each other. But Johnny misses his friend and goes over to Jabu's house one day and says 'Jabu lets be friends again'. Jabu agrees and so they shake hands and make up. A few days later Jabu says to Johnny, 'Johnny, what about my bicycle?' to which Johnny replies 'Look Jabu, this is about becoming friends again, not about bicycles'.

- How does this story relate to your own country?
- What could the bicycle be?
- How useful is this story when speaking about helping people come to see their role in injustice?

Story-Response

'Unlevel playing fields'

Imagine two teams are playing a soccer match, but the pitch is tilted at a 45-degree angle. The side playing downhill is unfairly advantaged and is able to run up a score of 19-2. At a certain point during the match the advantaged team is helped to realise that the match is not fair and that the playing field must be levelled before the game can continue. Some want the score to remain in place and think it's fair merely to carry on playing on a level field. Others want to level the scores as well as the pitch and start again. Yet others do not want to continue the game but want new rules and time to let the team who have been playing uphill recover from their exhaustion, injuries and sense of hopelessness, before replaying the match.

- How does this story relate to your own country?
- What should happen next?
- How useful is this story when speaking about helping people come to see their role in injustice?

Social restitution - 5 ideas for 'making things right'

1. A new discourse – social restitution
2. Disrupting the 'move on' trope - the past in the present
3. (Re)locating actors beyond victim, perpetrator, bystander
4. Individual/community level action - systemic impact, that restores personhood and redistributes 'capitals'
5. A methodological intervention – 'dialogical coming to see'

Social restitution

1

1. Restitution as 'Making things right' for unjust gain; restoring humanity
2. Social – since not institutional (legal or government)
3. A groundswell of individual and community action with potential systemic outcomes
4. Forward-looking, restorative rather than punitive
5. Motivated by understanding the Past in Present (PinP), memory.

The effects of the past on the present

2

1. The past is everything, the past is nothing but an excuse
2. Conflicted about the past
3. The positive effects of the past
4. Black South Africans understand the deep effects of the past on their lives
5. Do white South Africans recognise these effects?

PRESENT ~~PAST~~

BLACK RESPONSES

Racism: The unending story of being demeaned, excluded and dehumanised

- Vukani – excluded from restaurants as a bank director
- Luxolo and Donovan – an absence of confidence
- Siziwe – church says poverty is okay, fear of white people
- Sibu –judged for being black
- Evelyn – inferiority, shaking in a room of white people
- Lyanda – not human

Siziwe, 24, Black, Male

It's more material conditions like your mom's a domestic worker, you went to schools where you didn't have anything. So materially, economically it has affected me. For me it was more than that. It was emotional, mental, psychological, internal issues that I've had as a black child, as a black man. To come into the world and have to constantly think that you're black and have to constantly work on your mental emancipation. To be scared of white people. ...I would see white people and run away cos I was like: 'Oh my gosh, God is coming'... Then I started being angry at white people.

Siziwe – on university

... In this institution you're supposed to be equal ... I would go to class and think: “Well, he's white, I'm black. He's more intelligent obviously”. And for me it was that painful lack of self-belief that actually led to me failing my first year badly.

...When I came to UCT ...at Res. There were people that paid the black receptionist money to make sure that... she makes it a whites only block”.

...[Lecturers] you can tell the way they speak to you in class - that they think you are stupid because firstly you don't speak the way bourgeois people speak. You don't look the way bourgeois people look”.

Siziwe – on black consciousness

...It's a constant project, though... apartheid messed my family up, messed me up as a person as well, to think, for most of my life that I'm sub-human.

...Now being a black consciousness ...individual, I try and free other people as well. Cos I remember after reading that book I started to say: “Hang on, I used to be clever in high school. It doesn't matter where you're from, what race you are - if I put my mind to something I can actually excel... I'm intelligent. My opinion matters. During apartheid we were told that we are monsters, we are not people, we are less. ... It's a constant, daily project where I have to rework myself. It's not like: “Oh, I'm mentally free now.”.

Siziwe – on religion and poverty

...Because there are forces every day that say: “Ooh, look at your people... failing. Look at your people doing this. ...It's like you're holding a yolk and you want to take it off, but taking it off would mean being in denial of the realities of life.... I'm constantly tired because I'm constantly thinking of it. It's depressing, it makes you angry.

...[I have] issues with religion because they would preach things like it's okay to be poor... I don't know how to explain how my poverty has messed me up... People are like blinded. They think: ‘I think it's my fault’. They blame themselves, basically... The past is not really past.

Nollie, 32, black female, helpdesk assistant

I would say that instead of being angry and wanting to avenge ourselves, we basically were taught or helped into being forgiving and being able to live with the people that did whatever to us then.

But the [new government]... haven't really done anything to correct the past. It's still the same. Yes, the only thing that has changed is that we can be able to go there and there, and we can be able to go to these schools, and mix and all that. But when it comes to service and getting the people out of poverty, nothing has been done. We were suffering back then. We're still suffering even now. It hasn't changed at all.

Sipho, 56, Black, Male

It's very difficult to talk about the apartheid era because it brings so much pain and I might even go to bed without eating because I just lost my appetite talking about the past. ... [But] I don't mind even though you have opened old wounds that haven't properly healed.... Our past left us with so many emotional scars as well as physical scars ... I just wish that no person who was part of the struggle would live in poverty. ... I still feel that apartheid still exists.

Mayaya, 34, Black, Female

This traffic officer stopped my dad and my father's demeanour - and just how he became this nobody - and he was using language like: 'Yes, yes, baas' [boss]. ... how this man that I respected and possibly feared just came across like this little mouse against this man - this young white man. ...It made me angry.

...

I've gone to business meetings where I've had someone who works with me, but junior to me and they're a white person, and ...[the people I'm meeting with] will address this white person and proceed to give me the files to hold and carry. And I'll just smile and I'll take them, and then I'll hand them over to my assistant and say: 'Here you go. So, if we can just start the meeting.' But it's psychological.

Mayaya, 34, BF (cont.)

There is white superiority and black inferiority... "It's made me not trust white people ...I've found white people from Cape Town to be very patronising. Extremely. I've found black people in Cape Town to be very timid and very subservient.

...

There're lots of scars and wounds ...a lot of prejudice against differences. There's a lot of anger. There's a lot of hope for certain people, like me. There's a lot of opportunity as well. ... A sense of gratitude because you cannot imagine living in the South Africa that people describe. ...There's a sense of helplessness as well. So the past has made me grateful. Given me a sense of helplessness.

Zethu, 40, Black, Female

I can go to a store ...and be undressed and asked for an ID by security. Or when I'm about to pay be told something is expensive as if I didn't see the tag and all of that. I can deal with that. But when you kick my kid, it just rips me apart.

...I give you permission to ...Punch them and I'm happy now to go to the office to have a chat about that. That's when it stopped. I reflected on that and I thought: 'Gee, till today the only language racism can understand is violence. Really?' ... Anyone who calls him a baboon or whatever, anything racist, you know, he smacks them.

PRESENT ~~PAST~~

BLACK RESPONSES

Results of an intentionally unequal and inferior education

- The shame of limited prospects and shattered dreams – Fundiswa
- Frustration of job reservation and economic effects of the opportunity ceiling - Ricky

Alienation when you do make it

- Olivia – ‘I feel like an alien - I don’t fit in’
- Thamsanqa – ‘I’m forced to live in a world not my own’

Physical effects of poverty and inequality

- Evelyn’s story of land, property, dyslexia, participation

Welile, 24, Black, Male

I went to [township schools] ... then after CPUT. It's not the best education. You start to see that when you get to varsity - that the education that you had is not the same education that other people had. When I got to varsity I had to work twice as hard as another person that went to a suburban school. I didn't have any computer knowledge when I got to varsity. The language barrier was another obstacle. All of those things. The level of the education that we had. Things that other people told me that they learnt in grade 10 I didn't know. ...It was sad, but one thing that I told myself - I was already in varsity - it's either do or die. So when other people were out partying I had to study. I had to put in that extra effort because I knew other people know exactly what they're going to be writing and I don't.

PRESENT ~~PAST~~

WHITE RESPONSES

Geographical separation

- 'I don't have black friends' - Luke

Power and privilege, racism

- Rose- Shame and guilt about deference, power, complicity
- Sandy- 'People assume I'm racist'

Strong emotions

- Luke - 'why were there no discussions while I was growing up?'

Affirmative action

- Jack - 'I thought they were going to throw us away'

Limited understanding of deep apartheid's effects

- 'We don't know what to do about the past'

Graham's conflicts (29, white, male, marketer)

I want to help... People without work, food or housing... this is the government's fault ... I had no involvement or input or control... I had greater opportunities to education and jobs....

I don't honestly feel I have a responsibility... I dislike the labels which accuse me of creating the injustice. ...The past are still very much affecting people in South Africa...low levels of education ... inability ...to get good jobs. ...Leads to... crime and violence, which affects everyone.

Graham (cont.)

Previously disadvantaged people think that the well earning white people owe them... I can't say things have changed for me over the last 20 years. ... Finding work ... so many appealing jobs are only for BEE applicants... Jabu feeling as though he is owed something and that now injustice is alright. ...This is not right and a reflection of our government's corruption... The previously advantaged [need] to realise how much they benefited ... The government needs to stop thinking of themselves.

White guilt and shame

Noah: Personally, I feel guilty for being white and worry that people resent me because of the colour of my skin and my wealth (21, white male, student)

Hillary: I'm constantly faced with trying to reconcile the heritage that I am born from, which was the oppressors ... versus me trying to be an active member of society. ...grappling with white guilt' (21, white, female, student)

Sandy: It makes me ashamed of white people for what they allowed, and it gives me empathy for moving forward ...and to want to help to achieve equality (38, white female, homemaker)

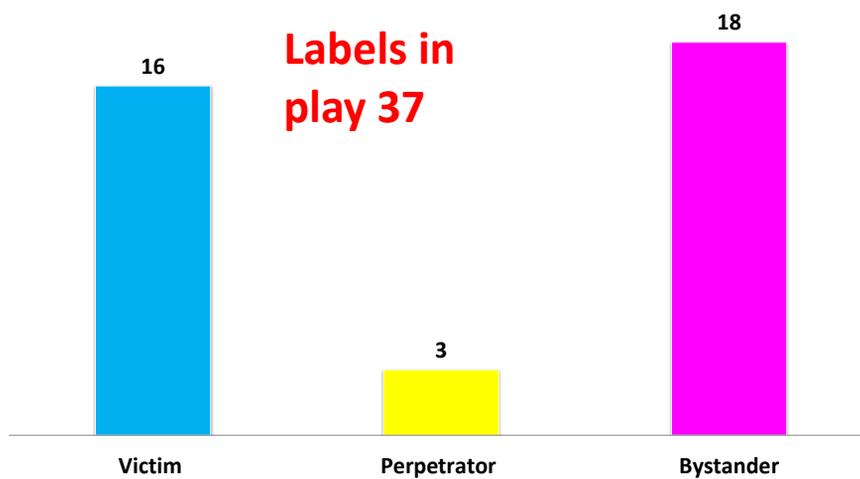

[Re]locating actors

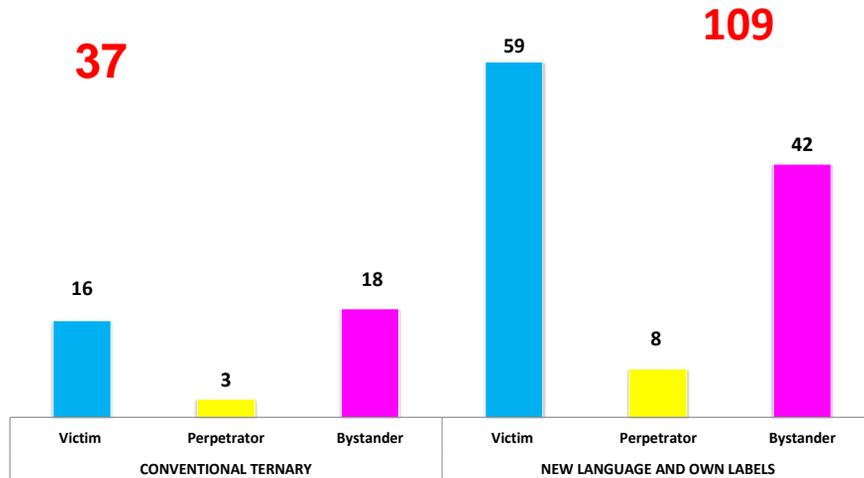

3

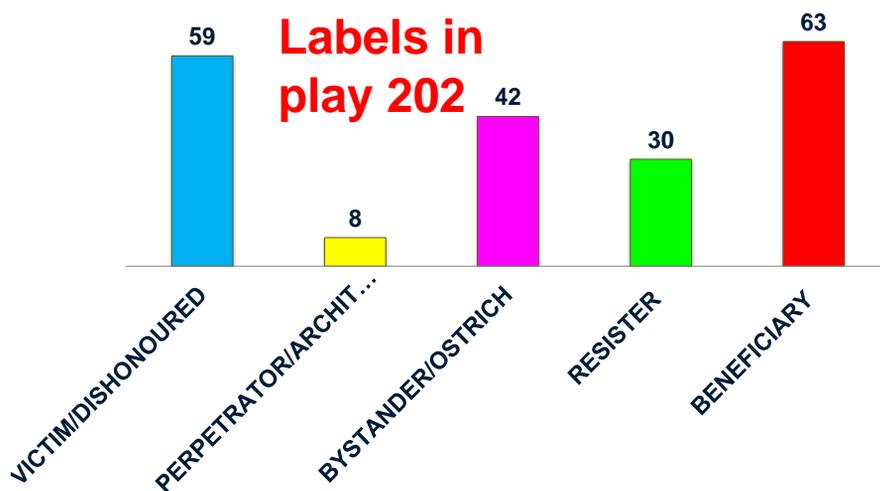

Conventional 'Victim-Perpetrator-Bystander'

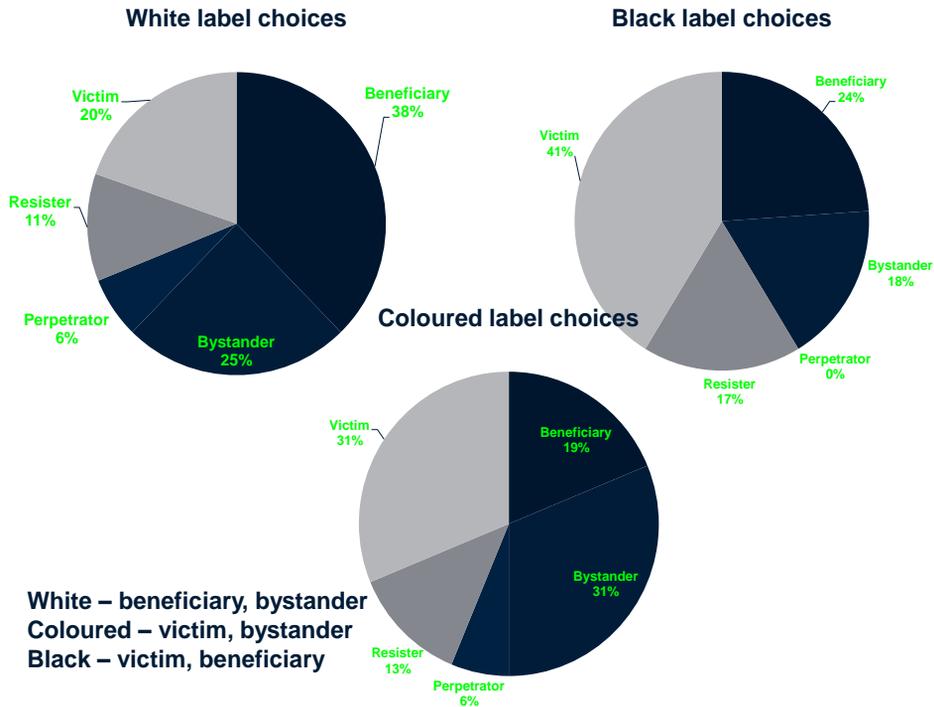

Changing language and add own labels

Adding 'Resister' and 'Beneficiary'

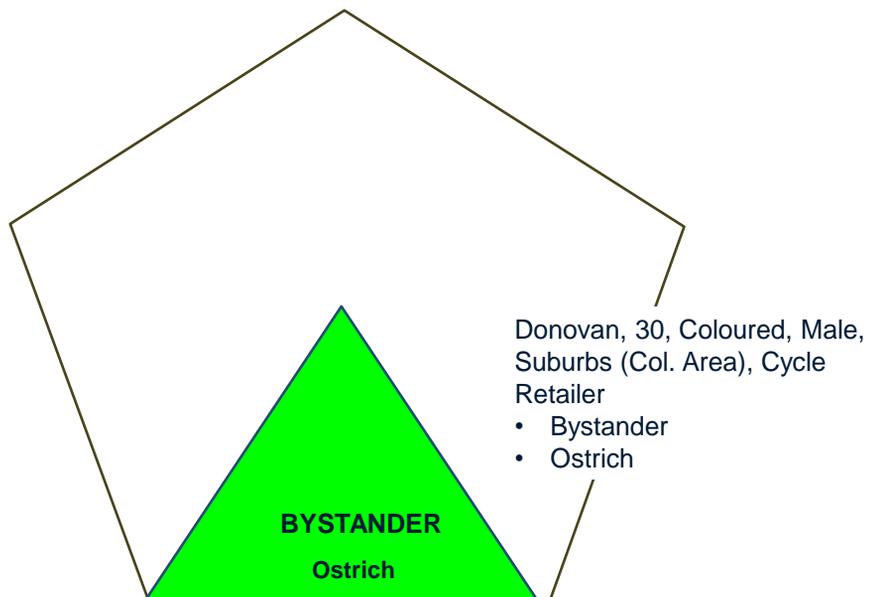

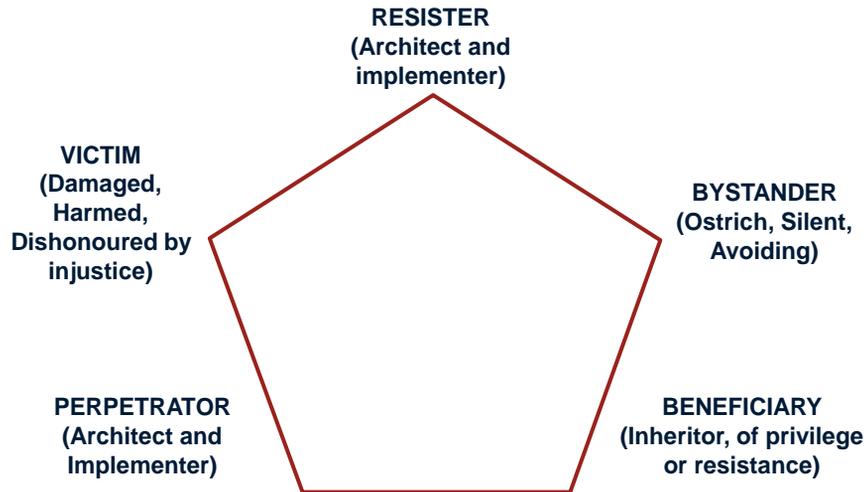

Class differences

1. White working class twice as likely to label themselves bystanders than white middle class participants (resisters)
2. Coloured middle class twice as likely to label themselves victims as Coloured working class participants
3. Black middle class much less likely to call themselves victims than black working/precariat class
4. Black middle class and black precariat twice as likely to label themselves beneficiaries than working class

Restitution Pentagon

Donovan, 30, Coloured male, bicycle technician

[The past] affects your mindset to some degree - your confidence, to some degree. Because if you meet someone of a different colour - and I'm referring to the lighter colour - you automatically think they're looking down on you ...So that messes with your head a little bit. Especially when I started working. ... a lot of the customers are white, more well off people. So I get a lot of that ... the way someone will talk to me. ... I'm the only coloured rider that rides downhill. ... A lot of the guys that race are Afrikaans...So I'll see a bit of cockiness, maybe, from them looking at me, but to me I've got to prove it in my riding.

ACTIVE social restitution, restoring personhood...

...In multiple domains

INDIVIDUAL

1. Pay for someone's education
2. Partner in business development
3. Take a salary increase holiday
4. Pay/receive restitution wealth tax
5. Pay/expect restitutionary wages for domestic workers.
6. Contribute skills and finance to local CBOs
7. Share inheritances
8. Mentoring
9. Learn/help someone learn an indigenous language

COMMUNITY

1. Start PinP community dialogues in churches, schools, workplace
2. Debt forgiveness for those affected by SA's past
3. Start a new political party that's not racialised
4. Develop a common purpose based on 'being for others'
5. 'Model C' the townships
6. A campaign for improved dinner party conversation
7. Community service across social boundaries
8. Ensure balanced media stories

Methodological - Interviews as Intervention

1. Way of seeing
 - Not caring to see
 - Distorted seeing
 - Coming to see
 - Seeing clearly
2. Creating communities of action
 - Ideas for change
 - Catalyst for discussion groups

Cracks of Light
Social Restitution for South Africa's Future
Sharlene Swartz

PART I TIME FOR CHANGE
Chapter 1 Restitution as a transforming conversation
Chapter 2 Ways of seeing: Why we are divided about South Africa's past and how to deal with it

PART II THE PAST IN THE PRESENT
Chapter 3 Racism: The unending story of being demeaned and dehumanised
Chapter 4 Opportunity denied: The effects of an intentionally inferior education
Chapter 5 White responses to South Africa's past

PART III MAKING THINGS RIGHT
Chapter 6 Locating yourself in the past
Chapter 7 Meanings and responses to 'restitution'
Chapter 8 Restoring personhood

PART IV TURNING TOWARD TOMORROW
Chapter 9 Ideas for everyday action
Chapter 10 A theory of social restitution

Questions for theological reflection

1. Why are churches not better spaces for reflection on 'the past in the present'?
2. Do we have an adequate theology of
 - The past
 - Restitution
 - Poverty
 - Blessing
3. What is our pastoral response to those who 'do not care to see' or 'see through distorted lenses'?
4. What role should grace play when it comes to addressing the past? What about 'guilt'?
5. How do we ensure that 'forgiveness' is not misused in ministry?